

Nixon fills ticket with Gov. Agnew

Agnew 'political accident'

By DONALD R. LARRABEE
Record Convention Bureau
MIAMI BEACH — Spiro Theodore Agnew's election as Governor of Maryland two years ago was regarded locally as a "political accident."

But his selection as Richard M. Nixon's running mate was a calculated compromise that went by the vice presidential book.

As a resident of Maryland, this writer took more than a reportorial interest in the 1966 campaign. The radio daily blared out a choral take-off of a show tune, "My Kind of Man, Ted Agnew is..." and this was the first most of us had ever heard of the man.

Agnew ran against George C. Mahoney, a Democrat who campaigned on an anti-open housing crusade. Mahoney was rejected by liberal Democrats who crossed over to elect the relatively unknown county executive of Baltimore County. This had been his only previous elective job.

As a personal aside, those of us who live in Maryland have been grumbling for a year or so because our taxes have been almost doubled under Agnew's administration. But perhaps this is inevitable these days.

The Agnew administration, however, sponsored the first statewide fair housing bill enacted south of the Mason-Dixon line. Tax reform had priority and spending priorities have been given to education, law enforcement, highway and bridge construction, notably across the Chesapeake Bay.

Agnew had been a Rockefeller man but took him at his word when he said he was withdrawing from the race in March. The Maryland Governor began looking closely at Nixon's statements and found he agreed with them. He now says that "timing" on the part of both candidates, had a good deal to do with his own decision to support Nixon.

But what of Nixon's decision to recommend Agnew?

There is no question that the choice was dictated by the political muscle of the controlling elements in the party who believe that a frontal attack on urban and state problems, including riot conditions, is what the public wants most this year.

The emerging strength of the GOP in the south was a big factor. Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina was highly influential. The west and south both pressed Mr. Nixon to name a right-of-center running mate; the eastern wing wanted a left-of-center candidate and Nixon settled for a middle-road type, like himself, who would appeal to the urbanized east and not ruffle the bonobos.

Reporters for southern papers say they believe the only three names that would have pleased Thurmond — and presumably the "law and order" wing of the party — were Agnew, Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee, and Gov. John Volpe of Massachusetts.

Nixon pledges GOP victory

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Richard M. Nixon Thursday night accepted his second presidential nomination, telling the happy Republican delegates, "This time we're going to win."

The delegates cheered for five minutes before letting Nixon begin his speech.

"We're going to win," Nixon told them, because the nation is divided and is crying out for the kind of leadership the Republicans can provide.

He lauded his running mate, Gov. Spiro T. Agnew of Maryland, and extended congratulations to all the defeated nominees for the battle they put up, but declared that the party had emerged in unity.

"I know you're going to fight harder for the victory we must win in November because we're going to be together in that campaign," Nixon promised.

"When a nation as great as America is bogged down in a war like that in Vietnam, crime is rampant and the President of the United States cannot travel abroad or in our cities without fear of violence, then it is time for new leadership in the United States."

"Tonight I accept the challenge and the commitment to bring that new leadership," he said, inviting the delegates to join him and "Find the truth, and live the truth and seek the truth."

"I do not promise the millennium in the morning," Nixon said.

"But I do promise action."

Calling for "new leadership not tied to the mistakes of the past," Nixon said, "The first priority of this administration will be to bring an honorable end to the war in Vietnam."

Nixon said all U.S. foreign commitments of the past 21 years must be reviewed in the light of the world today.

There are 200 million Americans and there are 2 billion others in the world, he said.

"I say the time has come for others to bear their share of the burden," Nixon said, getting a great ovation from the delegates.

Most Republican Conventions in recent decades have nominated on the first ballot. It is necessary to go back to 1940 to find another multi-ballot GOP Convention. That was the year when Wendell L. Willkie won on the sixth ballot.

Immigrant's son surprise selection

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Republican National Convention ratified Richard M. Nixon's choice of a vice presidential running mate Thursday night, nominating Maryland Gov. Spiro T. Agnew despite an attempted rebellion.

Michigan Gov. George Romney was put up as a rival to Nixon's man as liberal dissent surfaced on a turbulent convention floor.

But the dissidents didn't have the votes.

And before the roll call vote was completed, Romney stood to move that the Agnew nomination be made unanimous. A chorus of ayes, with but a scattering of audible dissent, made that official.

Gov. Agnew is unanimously the nominee of the Republican Party in 1968 for Vice President, proclaimed Rep. Gerald R. Ford of Michigan, the convention chairman.

At the time Romney made his motion the tabulation of votes stood at 1,128 votes for Agnew — far more than the 667 majority.

"We will go home to Michigan and we will do the best we can to achieve national, state and local Republican victories this fall," Romney said.

The uprising produced the first real excitement of the convention, but the futility of the uprising was plain from the start.

And the convention returned quickly to its script. That meant doing what Nixon wanted done.

Sen. Jack Miller of Iowa said he would put the name of New York Mayor John V. Lindsay in nomination, but he never did.

Romney didn't hide the fact that he would have relished the second spot. Asked about a Nixon spokesman's statement that he had indicated he was not interested, the Michigan governor said:

"I don't know what that could possibly be based on. I had no contact with the Nixon people."

Nixon, who conferred almost continuously with some 100 party leaders in the 12 hours following his nomination, announced his choice after several delays apparently caused by difficulty in selecting a nominee acceptable to all wings of the GOP.

Before announcing Agnew as his chosen running mate, Nixon reviewed his criteria that the vice president be "qualified to be president," an effective campaigner and "one who could assume the new responsibilities that I will give to the vice presidency, particularly in the area of states and cities."

Before becoming governor, the son of an immigrant Greek restaurateur served for four years as the county executive of sprawling suburban Baltimore County, which rings the city of Baltimore. This presumably was one of the factors in Nixon's choice.

Mayor John V. Lindsay of New York and Sens. Charles H. Percy of Illinois and Mark O. Hatfield of Oregon, strong civil rights supporters whose selection might have angered the Southern delegates who played a crucial role in Nixon's presidential triumph.

Agnew said, however, he is proud of his civil rights record and considers it one reason he was chosen. But he said also "no civil rights can be realistically achieved without the restoration of order, without the abandonment of the condoning of civil disobedience."

Civil rights played a key role in Agnew's election as governor two years ago. Maryland democrats, in a bitter three-way fight, gave the gubernatorial nomination to George Mahoney, who campaigned on the theme "Your home is your castle! Protect it!"

Agnew's father Theodore Spiro Anagnostopoulos, came from his native village of Gargalianos in Messenia, Greece in 1897 and settled in Baltimore where he was a successful businessman and a civic leader," Scouris said.

Scouris continued "with his activities in community life, the father was able to inspire his son, Spiro, and instill in him the desire and the enthusiasm to serve his fellow men, thus preparing the field to his present accomplishments."

Gov. Agnew rose from poverty

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Maryland's Gov. Spiro T. Agnew, son of a Greek immigrant who changed his name from Anagnostopoulos, capped a meteoric political career today when he was named by Richard M. Nixon as his choice for vice presidential running mate in November.

A Democrat-turned-Republican, Agnew is 49, one of the youngest governors the state has ever had and the first of Greek descent.

Born the son of a Greek restaurateur in Baltimore, Agnew reached adolescence during the depression years and frequently helped his family supplement their modest income with odd jobs after school.

He watched helplessly as his father's restaurant business failed and the older Agnew was forced to eke a living by hawking vegetables.

Graduating from a Baltimore public high school in 1937, he entered Johns Hopkins University as a chemistry major, but after three years decided that test tubes were just not his calling.

He transferred to the University of Baltimore night law school and took a job with the Maryland Casualty to support himself. It was while there that he met a secretary named Elinore (Isabel) Judeford.

Their marriage was postponed, however, by World War II, and it was not until he graduated from Officers' Candidate School at Fort Knox, Ky., in 1942 that the two were married.

Two years later, he was shipped overseas and saw action in France and Germany, including the Battle of the Bulge. He won four battle stars, the Bronze Star and the Combat Infantry Badge.

State GOP delegation split over choice of Gov. Agnew

By DAVID B. OTTAWAY
Record Convention Bureau

MIAMI BEACH — The Pennsylvania delegation to the Republican convention was in an uproar Thursday over presidential candidate Richard M. Nixon's choice of Maryland Governor Spiro Agnew as his running mate.

With evident understatement, John C. Jordan, state party chairman, said at a news conference that "frankly we are somewhat disappointed" with the choice of Agnew.

"We had hoped a more urban-oriented individual would be selected by Dick Nixon," he added.

Jordan also indicated that Gov. Raymond Shafer was irritated because Nixon had not consulted him before selecting Agnew as his vice presidential candidate.

During the balloting the delegation gave Agnew 31 votes, Gov. George Romney 20, and Mayor John Lindsay, 10. John Wood, Bethlehem, was one of the delegates to vote for Lindsay.

While both Shafer and Jordan predicted a Republican victory in Pennsylvania this fall, it was no secret at the Diplomat Hotel that the Governor was now deeply worried about the party's prospects with Agnew on the ticket.

One aide to the Governor said the party could count on the 27 per cent of the population registered as Republicans in the state and not much more.

Both supporters of New York Governor Nelson Rockefeller and Richard Nixon, badly divided Wednesday, were united Thursday in their concern for the fate of the party.

Both sides were anxious to have a liberal on the ticket with Nixon who could appeal to the urban and black voters. The name of New York City Mayor John Lindsay was that most often mentioned.

"There is a strong feeling within the delegation, particularly among Nixon types who want a liberal, that his name (Lindsay's) be put in nomination," said Jordan.

Jordan said that the Republican candidate for the United States Senate Richard Schweiker felt "very strongly" that his campaign to oust Democratic Senator Joseph Clark would be helped the most with Lindsay as the vice presidential candidate.

But Jordan said that Lindsay had personally asked him to keep the delegation from initiating a floor fight or putting forward his name in opposition to Agnew.

Nixonites were also mad because the choice of Agnew was bound to further alienate the Rockefeller wing of the party endangering the party unity they had so carefully been fostering here.

The feeling among delegates was that Nixon had sold out to the south and turned his back on the cities.

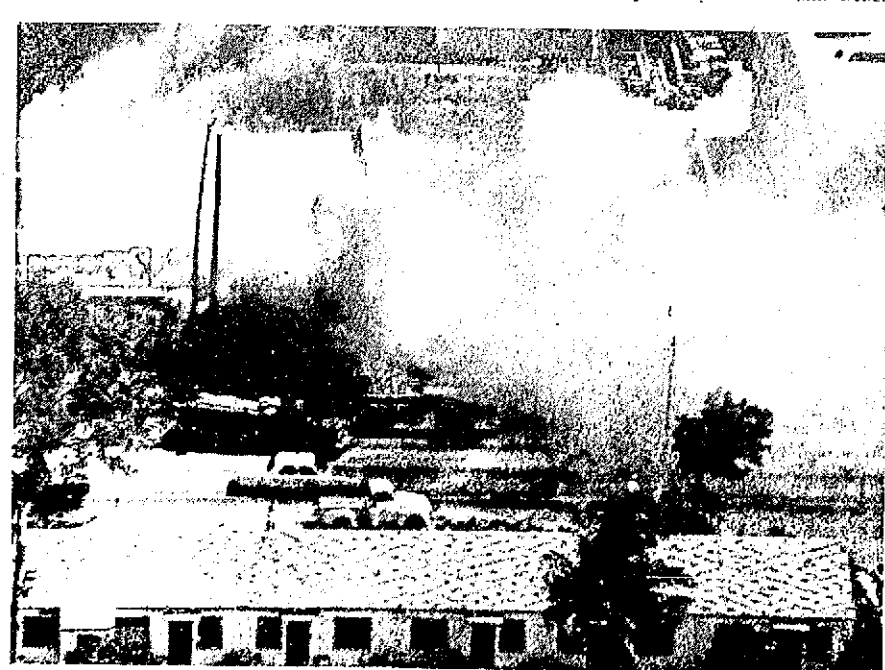

"He's going after the white backlash and the Wallace vote," remarked one Rockefeller supporter.

Negro delegates and alternates were furious when they learned of Nixon's decision.

Two Negroes killed

Guard holds Miami section

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Liberty City became "occupied territory" Thursday night as National Guard troops moved into a riot-torn area where two Negroes were killed during a frenzy of burning, shooting and looting.

This aerial view shows a laundry store, smoke billowing from its roof and front, after the building was hit by a molotov cocktail Thursday. For the second day, Miami's Negro district was torn by burning, looting and gunfighting. At least two persons were reported wounded in the disturbances. (UPI Telephoto)

"We've had two killed," said Police Lieutenant Jay Golden.

He said the unidentified victims both were shot by police in the riot area. Four other persons were hospitalized with gunshot wounds.

Golden said he had reports of a possible third shooting death.

Five hundred troops supplemented police at 6 p.m., when a curfew was ordered in the trouble area, 10 miles across Biscayne Bay from Miami Beach.

Accompanied by two armored personnel carriers, a detail of 50 riflemen wearing gas masks marched up 62nd Street with bayonets unsheathed. Also with them were 75 policemen armed with shotguns and riot sticks.

The police and troops confronted a crowd of 100 Negroes which ignored orders that they disperse.

A police helicopter hovered, surveying the scene.

Despite televised pleas for peace from Gov. Claude Kirk after an afternoon of violence, sporadic shots were heard after the troops moved into the area. And reporters in the area saw scattered looting.

Police patrolled the streets with a tear gas machine that looked like a rifle barrel with an antifoam can on the end that laid out a thick, blinding fog of gas which officers said was "very effective."

The governor issued his plea on three Miami television stations. He asked the rioters to go to their homes but said, "Any viewer who has in mind playing a little sniper let me tell you this: We won't just return the fire. We'll evacuate the area, use gas and get the sniper out. This is no little play game."

New image was required

Nixon push carefully plotted

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Richard Nixon staked his success or failure at the Republican National Convention on campaign strategy carefully plotted long before the primaries to win not the nomination but the presidency.

Plans laid out two years ago, when Nixon made his then-secret decision to run, included two fundamental campaign goals:

1. To remove any bad personal impressions that may have lingered in the nation's memory after his 1960 race with John F. Kennedy.

2. To go for broke, run as though he had the nomination sewed up, and take no risks of alienating Republicans whose help and votes he would need in the fall.

Nixon strategists, and Nixon himself, analyzed his 1960 defeat and determined this time to avoid at all costs what they considered a fundamental error.

An adviser called the 1960 race an endurance contest. Nixon had pledged to visit 50 states, and did, and toward the end of the campaign, especially during the televised debates with Kennedy, his public image was one of "a tired, worn, haggard man."

"This time we insisted that he get sufficient rest, and saw to it that he did. Four times during the primaries he relaxed in Florida. Once we took him for a two-day rest in Denver.

"The press called it a 'leisurely' campaign. It wasn't; we simply ran with brains instead of legs. This year Nixon has looked tanned and fresh every time he has appeared on television."

Fewer public appearances, said the adviser, also allowed Nixon and his staff to give more care to public statements and how they were presented.

To illustrate, in the New Hampshire primary Nixon delayed his entry until the last possible moment, and then campaigned mostly via broadcast speeches.

He shunned handshaking tours, tried to avoid occasions when he would have to make off-the-cuff statements, refused to debate Gov. George Romney.

"We even worried about running into Romney in hotels," said the Nixon strategist.

Nixon had laid the groundwork for his campaign long before his final decision to run.

In the off-year campaign of 1966 he traveled 30,000 miles, visited 35 states and spoke on behalf of 87 congressional candidates. In the election the Republicans picked up 47 House seats, three in the Senate, and added nine governorships. The result was not only a broader Republican base than Nixon had in 1960 but many of the new officeholders were in Nixon's political debt.

One of the "myths" about Nixon, as his adviser termed it, "was the can't-win thing, the myth that he was a loser." For that reason, he said, "we were wary about entering any primaries. We know that if we dropped a single one it would be all over."

Thus the extreme caution in the New Hampshire race, which Nixon strategists felt paid off (their polls showed him leading Romney six-to-one even though Romney withdrew, denying Nixon a crushing victory).

Nixon's subsequent primary campaigns deliberately avoided states which might have helped him win the nomination but could have hurt him in the general election.

"We could have whipped Ronald Reagan in California," his adviser said, "but we'd have lost all those right-wing votes in November. We also could have beaten Case and Shafer (Sen. Clifford Case of New Jersey and Gov. Raymond Shafer of Pennsylvania) but they are both popular men with their constituents and it ultimately would have hurt us."

Nixon also, for the same reason, tiptoed gingerly around states whose delegations were pledged to favorite sons.

He was invited to address the Maryland delegation, pledged to Gov. Spiro T. Agnew, and declined. Agnew told him he thought it was a mistake because both Nelson A. Rockefeller and Ronald Reagan had done so. Nixon at length made a brief, informal talk to the delegates at a luncheon at Baltimore's Friendship Airport.

Further Nixon strategy was to carry out strong television campaigns, with his "new image," in large states such as Michigan, Illinois, Ohio, Texas, California.

"Those people were used to seeing a grim, grizzled Nixon," his adviser said. "This time they saw a smiling, fresh Nixon."

The ABA also announced a 10-year project of research in history and drama aimed at recreating—for use in 1976—the accomplishments of American lawyers in the past 300 years.

Arthur E. Sutherland, professor of law at Harvard University, was named to write the history.

Emmet Lavery, New York playwright and lawyer, was named by the ABA's Centennial Commission, to produce a series of national television programs to depict "the enduring impact of the great in the law."

The curfew was broadened to order the closure of all bars and places which sell alcoholic beverages by 10:30 p.m. Normally, such sales could continue until 2 a.m.

The sale of all firearms, including air guns, was prohibited for the life of the emergency. The city also banned the sale of gasoline except that pumped directly into vehicular fuel tanks.

State Police reinforcements have been on a standby basis at the York Barracks throughout much of this week, but they have not been called to active duty.

Push deep into valley

Allies seek to blunt offensive

SAIGON (AP) — Allied troops plunged deeper into the A Shau Valley Thursday looking for war material believed amassed for what the enemy calls its forthcoming "final, definitive general offensive."

LBJ's trouble internal disorder

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson disclosed Thursday he has an intestinal disorder—he called it diverticulitis—but his doctor didn't—that will require his return to an Army hospital for more tests next week.

But the President said he is feeling "excellent."

His physician, Vice Adm. George G. Burkley, said the ailment is a sort of protrusion of the wall of the large intestine—what he termed "out pouchings." There was no indication immediately of what form of treatment is required or whether any surgery might be needed.

But Burkley said Johnson does not have diverticulitis, a condition involving inflammation. Diverticulitis sometimes can be helped by diet and sometimes requires an operation.

Apparently Johnson's present condition dates back at least to 1960 and there was no immediate explanation of why it was being disclosed Thursday for the first time.

Burkley said the annual physical checkups since 1960 had shown the existence of the protrusions, or, in medical terminology, diverticula.

Although there must be some reason at this time for a measure of concern, Burkley said the President is in no discomfort and no inflammation has been detected.

He said the protrusions of the colon wall are not uncommon and ordinarily not considered serious for someone in Johnson's age group. The President will be 60 Aug. 27.

The President and Mrs. Johnson both entered Brooke Army Medical Center here Tuesday for annual physical checkups.

While Mrs. Johnson stayed on, the President went back to the LBJ ranch 75 miles to the north, on Tuesday and flew back by helicopter Thursday.

Both he and Mrs. Johnson returned to the ranch. But Johnson told reporters as he left the hospital he would check in again next week for still more examinations that must be preceded by 48 hours on a liquid diet.

White House press secretary George Christian told reporters at a press center in Austin, Tex., that Burkley advised him all tests for the first lady were normal and "everything was within normal limits."

Johnson hasn't stopped work between helicopter trips to and from Brooke Hospital, and even has done a few stunts en route.

Johnson signed some bills and announced a batch of postmaster nominations Thursday.

But first reports indicate the yields of weapons and supplies so far have been disappointing. Ferried in by 200 helicopters beginning Sunday, 3,000 soldiers of the U.S. 101st Air Cavalry Division and the Vietnamese 1st Infantry Division have made only light contact with the North Vietnamese and killed 15 of them in the first four days of the operation.

B52 eight-engine bombers have been swarming over the valley and plastering suspected storage areas for days.

It was the appearance of the B52s that may have caused the bulk of the North Vietnamese to pull back into neighboring Laos.

U.S. officers say air reconnaissance had shown the North Vietnamese had returned in force since the last allied drive through the valley in April and May. Heavy aircraft fire from the valley downed two helicopters and an F100 Supersaber last Friday.

In the sporadic fighting, 2 U.S. soldiers have been killed and 22 wounded. South Vietnamese losses were 8 killed and 18 wounded. Some of the casualties were incurred the first day when enemy anti-aircraft fire brought down a helicopter that crashed and burned, killing one crewman and injuring two others. Two other helicopters were so badly damaged by enemy fire they were forced to land.

Public assistance hits $3.1 million

STROUDSBURG — Sen. T. Newell Wood announced this week the public assistance program which gave aid to 2,905 persons in the five counties of the northern tier showed expenditures of $3,136,723 for the fiscal year.

Administered under the direction of the state Department of Public Welfare, Sen. Wood said, the outlay represents assistance grants, —$874,246. In Monroe County medical, burial and administration expenses.

Compiling figures for Monroe, Pike, Susquehanna, Wayne and Wyoming Counties, the senator noted Susquehanna ranked first assisting 1,043 persons at a total cost of $940,999.

Grants total $1,900,536. Wayne County was in second place with 623 persons assisted and expenditures totaling $874,246. In Monroe County there were 563 persons on the rolls. Total cost was $636,208.

Senator Wood reported the assistance grants for the five counties totaled $1,900,536. Medical and burial costs reached $922,703.

Administration expenditures to direct the public assistance program in the northern tier counties ran $313,484, said Senator Wood.

County breakdown

Following is a breakdown by counties showing the number of persons assisted, expenditures and the percentage of population receiving aid under this program:

Monroe: Persons, 563; total costs, $636,208; assistance grants, $328,993; medical-burial, $240,331; administration, 66,884; percentage, 1.3.

Pike: Persons, 117; total costs, $122,046; assistance grants, $87,739; medical-burial, $17,993; administration, $16,309; percentage 1.2.

Susquehanna: Persons, 1,043; total costs $940,999; assistance grants, $655,611; medical-burial, $171,741; administration, $113,647; percentage, 3.2.

Wayne: Persons, 623; total costs $874,246; assistance grants, $442,496; medical-burial, $382,056; administration, $49,694; percentage, 2.0.

Wyoming: Persons, 559; total costs, $563,224; assistance grants, $385,697; medical-burial, $110,577; administration, $66,950; percentage, 3.4.

Five-counties totals: persons, 2,905; total costs, $3,136,723; assistance grants, $1,900,536; medical-burial, $922,703; administration, $313,484.

In releasing the report, Sen. Wood explained the Public Assistance program is a "family-centered and community-based program providing income for the essentials for living, health care and rehabilitative social services to needy families and individuals."

The program, Sen. Wood added, is carried out by 67 County Boards of Assistance.

The high employment rate in the state, said Sen. Wood, was a tremendous factor in reducing costs for the state. During the fiscal year, he pointed out, about 84,000 persons in 24,000 families in the state left the assistance rolls because the family head found a job.

Savings to the Commonwealth were at a monthly rate of $3 million in discontinued assistance payments.

Theater league deficit $23,000

NEWFOUNDLAND — The Newfoundland Theatre League, Inc., not actively involved in the Summer Theatre at the Newfoundland Arts Center this season, except for the August 9 and 10 Pocono Community Players' production of "Come Blow Your Horn," is working to whittle down the $23,000 remaining of the debt incurred in the first two years of its operation.

The entertainment this weekend, and the accompanying art show and auction by the First Gallery of New York, are both the "opening guns" in the League's attack on the staggering debt.

The Executive Board of the League, together with one or two of the directors, has been meeting every Thursday night in Newfoundland to plan its strategy in securing funds not only to reimburse its creditors, but to create a fund for full operation of the League's activities.

A heartening note in the "color it dark" picture of debt is the fact that some of the creditors have indicated their willingness to make the remaining amounts due them a "gift" to the League in appreciation of the efforts made to bring increased business to the area through the operation of the Center.

This Fall, the League, the University of Scranton, and the Emily Orsman Foundation, will be working together to plan and carry out a program designed for everyone, with special children's workshops.

Ray Angle's life shuns retirement

DINGMAN'S FERRY — Raymond Angle is a young man of 63 who doesn't know the meaning of the word retirement.

As a matter of fact, the "youthful" squire of the 120 acre "Triangle Farm" in Dingman's Ferry, is keeping more busy now than he did when commuting from here to Kearney, N.J., where he worked for Western Electric.

Ray, as he is called to everyone who knows him in Pike County and throughout the region, officially retired from Western Electric in June, 1959 after 30 years of service as a quality control engineer and shop foreman on the construction of the nationwide telephone dialing system.

Born in Dingman's Ferry Jan. 6, 1905 on the DePue farm now occupied by his cousin, Herb, Ray moved permanently to "Triangle Farms" in 1956, which had been the home of his father, Ralph and mother, Ida.

"My dad farmed it," he said. "I only have a couple of gardens."

In the fall of 1956 Ray became secretary to the Delaware Township Board of Supervisors. He officially resigned from the post June 30 which is now filled by Supervisor William Reser.

He resigned, he said, because he wanted more time. More time to travel, for instance to Cape Cod. But the retired Army Lt. Col., who had six years active duty and 23 years in the reserves, seems to have no time at all.

"I have a lot of private business," he smiled.

He's a real estate salesman for the Allan Fidas Agency and "That keeps me fairly busy," he said. He's also with the Penn State Research Department doing research on fishing in Streams in Lehman and Delaware Townships in addition to the Delaware River. He's also secretary-treasurer of the Dingman's Ferry Water Company and adjunct of the Dingman's Ferry American Legion Post.

Married to the former Elizabeth Willis, Ray has two sons, Roy Jr. of Jamestown, N.Y. and Robert of Allegan, Mich.

Ray, who graduated from Milford High School and Cornell University, said the township is growing by leaps and bounds. When he was first secretary, he said the budget was $15,000 and today is $80,000 while the assessed valuation jumped from $800,000 to $3.1 million.

'Poor People' miss again

Once again the "Poor People" have blurred their image as far as the general public is concerned.

A recent "Poor People's March" in Washington gained little for Rev. Ralph Abernathy and followers. In fact, it undoubtedly lost much for the campaign to aid the Negro and poor white people of the United States. Violence, dirt, lack of control and a general disregard for authority doomed the Washington encampment almost from the start.

On Tuesday, many of the leaders of the ill-fated Washington march appeared at the Republican National Convention in Miami Beach. With the 53 "Poor People" came a wave of confusion that hung over Convention Hall for a lengthy period of time.

While the "Poor People" appearances are with purpose, the manner in which they are conducted have set their campaigns back a matter of years.

Instead of trying to win favor, make impressions and gain friends, the campaigns, almost at every turn, have alienated affections, caused hard feelings and brought outbursts of violence.

Tuesday night's shouting of "Soul Power" by the Poor People" added a great deal of confusion and surprise to an already confused convention floor.

As a result, there had to be more ill feelings resulting from the appearance than gains in behalf of the demonstrating forces.

If there are to be gains in the future, and we certainly hope that there will be gigantic gains, they will have to be made as the result of careful planning and even more careful carrying out of movements toward a long-sought destination.

Major project

Landfills, their size and location, may sound like a trashy subject, but it is one of utmost importance, as Stroudsburg, East Stroudsburg and Stroud Township are finding out at the present time.

East Stroudsburg particularly is finding the situation most pressing as only one week of fill remains in the borough stockpiles. The current problem will force East Stroudsburg into the situation of obtaining additional fill from private sources.

However, from our point of view the entire landfill situation, other than a strong protest by La-Re-Do Land Corp., has been brought about by inactivity by all the landfill committees.

There has been a lot of discussion. But, there has also been a lot of hesitancy on the part of all concerned. The entire problem has been allowed to drag out, when activity might have brought the problem to a head much sooner.

Now that the situation is critical, it has become apparent that there can be no further delay. All concerned now must sit down and talk over the situation, reach an agreement and complete the task of forming a strong and workable landfill program for future years.

The situation will undoubtedly get worse before it gets better, as the area population continues to grow, unless there is some drastic and rapid action.

Any further delay will undoubtedly only make the situation worse. Progress must be shown and shown quickly.

Congressional Quiz

Rat control program

By Congressional Quarterly

One of the most controversial issues of the first session of the 90th Congress was a rat-control program. Although funds for the program were authorized in November 1967, they have yet to be appropriated. This quiz will test your knowledge of the background and provisions of the rat-control program.

1. The rat population of the United States, estimated by the National Communicable Disease Center to be equal to the human population, numbers about: (a) 10 million; (b) 50 million; (c) 100 million; (d) 200 million.

2. One major difference between the original rat-control program and the program finally enacted was that the original program: (a) provided for block grants to the states for rat control; (b) provided for twice the amount authorized in the final program; (c) authorized funds for one fiscal year only; (d) covered only two-thirds the cost of local rat-control programs.

3. Rat-control provisions were successfully included in: (a) the Department of Housing and Urban Development appropriations bill; (b) the Public Health Service Amendments; (c) the Partnership for Health Amendments; (d) the Department of Health, Education and Welfare appropriations bill.

4. Actual funding of the rat-control program, included in the fiscal 1968 second supplemental appropriations bill, was considered and rejected by: (a) the House Banking and Currency Committee; (b) the House Appropriations Committee.

5. Cities which have applied for rat control grants number more than: (a) 25; (b) 60; (c) 75; (d) 120.

ANSWERS: 1. (d); 2. (d); 3. (c); 4. (b); 5. (b).

Allen - Goldsmith Report

'Sleepers' in platform

Robert S. Allen

John A. Goldsmith

MIAMI BEACH — The Republican National Convention has spiced its 1968 party platform with a handful of "sleepers" which will be loudly trumpeted to the voters in the campaign weeks ahead.

Publicized controversy here has centered, for the most part, on the official GOP position on Vietnam. The attack on crime and the crisis in the cities got an occasional secondary mention in the accounts of platform drafting sessions and convention action.

Overshadowed by those controversies, however, are equally important party pronouncements on such issues as the draft and the 40-hour week.

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, Ill., chief architect as resolutions chairman, thinks the platform will play an important role in this year's presidential and congressional campaigns.

Platforms of both political parties have had little campaign impact in recent elections. Generally the bland party pronouncements have been forgotten once the candidates began airing their own views on national issues. Here, however, are some of the party statements which could, as Dirksen predicts, give the platform new meaning in this campaign year.

VOTE — More states should reconsider their laws with respect to a vote for 18-year-olds and "each such state should decide this matter for itself." The platform urges such a reevaluation "now."

DRAFT — The platform pledges action to reduce the number of years in which a young man is vulnerable to the military draft. Further, it states that "when military manpower needs can be appreciably reduced, we will place the selective service system on stand by and substitute a voluntary force obtained through adequate pay and career incentives."

SOCIAL SECURITY — Long sought improvements are promised in several phases of the Social Security system. The platform then promises to "provide automatic cost of living adjustments under Social Security and the Railroad Retirement Act."

WORK WEEK — "The 40-hour week adopted 30 years ago needs reexamination to determine whether or not a shorter work week, without loss of wages, would produce more jobs, increase productivity and stabilize prices," the platform says.

COLLEGE — The platform favors an off-the-top tax credit to help parents meet the increasing costs of college for their children. It also endorses a new plan, advanced by the National Association of Life Underwriters, which would let parents set aside an annual amount, tax free, for future college costs.

EV PRAISED — Dirksen, an old hand at legislative compromise, is being credited with resolving platform disputes so as to leave no scars. According to one participant, Dirksen shed his even temper on only one occasion during the long late-night deliberations and apologized for that lapse.

One source of possible dispute was skirted when the Resolutions Committee adopted language which barely suggested the current senate controversy over President Johnson's nomination of Abe Fortas to be Chief Justice and Homer Thornberry to be an Associate Justice. Dirksen has been supporting the president's Supreme Court nominees, but Sen. Robert P. Griffin, Mich., had said he would seek a platform statement opposing them.

The approved language says only that public confidence in the courts is "absolutely essential" and pledges "a determined effort to rebuild and enhance public respect for the supreme court and all other courts in the United States." It says the GOP urges application of the "highest standards" in making court appointments.

In other platform maneuvering, Sen. Karl E. Mundt, S.D., is reported to have worked behind the scenes to make sure that the GOP pledges of help to the cities did not completely subordinate the traditional pledge to help the farmer get his fair share of the national income.

That's politics
A little less than a year ago Michigan Gov. George Romney was a front-runner, with former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, for the GOP presidential nomination. Then Romney said he had been brainwashed on a trip to Vietnam, and his campaign began to sag.

A very disconsolate figure at this GOP convention, Romney is reported to have put out vice presidential feelers to the camps of Nixon and New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller. Romney was, however, not immediately solicited by either as a possible running mate.

Instead, according to one GOP official, Romney was, himself, asking friends to intercede with new front-runners in behalf of Romney for vice president.

Turn about, maybe

WASHINGTON — You may recall that the good people of South Vietnam recently had a general election. It was, of course, supervised by the United States, which had a few hundred observers on hand to make sure the bad guys didn't win.

And now the United States is about to have an election, and I am hoping the South Vietnamese will send observers over here to supervise and to make certain leaders friendly to South Vietnam are elected. As an old Vietnamese wise man once told me, "Turnabout is fair play."

Let us now imagine the scene at Dulles International Airport on the day the Vietnamese election observing team arrives. The press is assembled at the foot of the plane's off-ramp, the microphones are clustered at a lecturn and the TV cameras are grinding.

Official observer
Ambassador Extraordinary Lotsa Luc, South Vietnam's number one official observer, brushes his companions back out of camera range and assumes the answering position for questions. (Actually, he is the first one to ask a question, but it is off the record. What he asks is, "Lord, is it always this hot in Washington?")

The first question comes from television newsman Chet Bunkley, who said, "Mr. Ambassador, some people think you have a lot of nerve coming here to supervise an election in the cradle of democracy. What do you say to that?"

"Well, I have no wish to rock the cradle — heh, heh, pardon me, that was a little Vietnamese joke — however, I feel obliged to point out that South Vietnam has a considerable stake in how your election turns out. After all, we have committed dollars and men to protecting the American way of life in Asia."

The next query comes from commentator Walter Notquite, the celebrated authority. "Yes, but don't you think the American people are capable of choosing their own leaders, without outside guidance and/or interference?"

"Judging from the record, I should say no. American politicians seem to spend half of their time running for office and the other half running from assassins. We hope to end all this turbulence."

Quickly, from Howard K. Smythe: "Are you saying we don't have free elections?"

They're too free. For instance, the United States ruled that Communists couldn't vote in our country, thereby eliminating the possibility the Vietcong would win our election. In turn, we are afraid of your peace candidates; they might end the war by selling us out. By tomorrow I'll have a list of which Americans will be allowed to vote. Sorry, no more questions."

You've heard of love-ins? Well, a political convention must be sort of a hate-in.

The government is always talking about eliminating pockets of poverty. And why not? It's already eliminated the need for taxpayers to have any pockets at all.

With $10 you once could fill up a cart with groceries at the supermarket. Now with only $10, you don't even need a cart!

Civil War draft riots

The Second Rebellion by James McCague (Dial Press, $5.95) A well-told story of New York City's 1863 Civil War draft riots.

McCague carries the reader down Third Avenue with a howling mob of club-wielding, wretchedly poor New Yorkers. He depicts the thick of battle between outnumbered police and a mob complete with clawing, tearing women. He also carefully explains why New York went wild.

New York had 800,000 residents. A few lived in America's greatest luxury, fed by Delmonico's and clothed by Brooks Brothers. Fortunes were made by cheating the government on war contracts. Gold speculators rarely lost a penny.

But in the lower East Side was a belt of misery unequalled in America. There were tens of thousands of Irish treated as second-class citizens. Some lived in fetid holes dug under rotting tenements. A small girl was stabbed for the penny she had begged and her mother didn't notice her for a week.

Americans, rich and poor, had lived in an era when the federal government rarely touched their lives. Even the troops sent off to Civil War carnage were sent by states, not Washington. Then came the draft. That brought the federal government home to Five Points, New York's most wretched slum.

The draft was bad enough. The law's provision that a rich man could buy his way out for $300 was worse. All opponents of the war leaped on it. The poor exploded. And what began as a righteous anger ended in the looting of homes, arson and mass bloodshed.

Between 17 and 70 persons perished. No one was quite sure.

This is a human story, not unrelated to our current troubles in the streets.

Vietnam of peace

VIETNAM, OUR BELOVED LAND. By Nguyen Cao Dam and Tran Cao Linh. Charles E. Tuttle, Rutland, Vt. $3.50

Conjecture: Any book of a collection of photos on Vietnam must show nothing but blood, horror, war.

Fact: This excellent one contains 86 pictures and eight of them deal with soldiers. All of the eight are of Vietnamese soldiers and none of them is gory.

The other 78 photos reflect exactly what the team of photographer-authors say in their title.

It is not quite enough to say that Dam and Linh are technically excellent photographers and dismiss them with that. Through thoughtful use of shadow, light and careful composition they have produced an emotional experience.

Their beloved Vietnam is one of oxen and mothers and children and old men and rice fields and fishermen and villages and wells. It is peaceful and beautiful and they have captured it.

Simplicity is the theme of their work, with few photographic tricks thrown in. Linh and Dam, with their cameras and very simple text, have recorded the Vietnam that can be.

Mink's eye view

SYLA, THE MINK. By Evan Clarkson. Dutton, $3.95

The framework of this example of nature writing is a fictional narrative about the life of a young mink. But actually it is a broader story about the whole wildlife complex of a small river valley in southwest England.

One autumn day Sylva, a 4-month-old female, escapes from a mink farm and goes native. Fortunately the weather and food supply are favorable as she teaches herself to hunt and fish. Surviving the winter, she mates in the spring, has a litter of five kits, and tries to raise them—although the hazards of nature cut down all but one. Finally she receives an injury that results in a fatal infection. Her life is brief.

Sylva's story is told against a background of all that is going on around her. Through the changing seasons there are the endless variations in the existence of small animals, birds, insects, flowers and fish — not to mention the occasional intrusions of human beings.

Clarkson describes the rigid interdependence of all living creatures, the balance that nature maintains between predators and victims, between vegetation and devourers, one species and another — in short, the ecology of a given habitat. Nor has he overlooked the conservationists' point that poisonous residues from insecticides pass from one form of life to another, gradually accumulating to the lethal stage for fish, fowl and mammal alike.

There is nothing stodgy or academic about the story; Clarkson's prose has a smoothly lyrical quality. His narrative about one mink is really an exploration of nature — both beautiful and grim — in one locality.

Samuel Johnson illustrated

DR. JOHNSON AND HIS WORLD. By F. E. Halliday. Viking Press, $6.50

Those serious readers who detest picture books (and all Johnsonians are serious readers) will find this little volume an agreeable surprise.

Halliday has assembled a lively and relevant collection that illustrates every phase of the doctor's life and times, and the pleasure of his company is enhanced by the visual tidbits.

The text is readable and, though it contains nothing unfamiliar to Johnsonians and Boswellians, is rather better than the usual connective tissue for illustrations (154 in this instance). In fact, it's a useful introduction for the uninitiated.

The distinctive qualities of the 18th century are its sense of certitude, its proprieties, its literature, its distrust of emotionalism and its faith in reason. Samuel Johnson, lexicographer, poet, essayist and critic, embodies all these qualities, along with a remarkable bundle of personal idiosyncrasies.

Style, as always, expresses the man, and there are special delights in Johnson's. Johnson was sometimes criticized for the polysyllabic solemnities of his prose, and a celebrated example is his reference to a mountain he saw while on tour with Boswell. He called it a "considerable protuberance."

Halliday has a photograph of it, and the reader instantly realizes that far from being an elephantine conceit, Johnson's phrase fits the object perfectly.

Remote as the Age of Johnson is to ours (the remoteness being one of its charms), its end came within sight of the industrial revolution and the galloping technologies of the 18th and 20th centuries. Shortly before Johnson's death, Lunardi ascended from London in a balloon.

The ailing Johnson's comment has a contemporary ring.

"We now know a method of mounting the air," he said, "and, I think, are not likely to know more... I had rather now find a medicine that can ease an asthma."

Moderates taking over

MIAMI BEACH — The political moderates are recapturing the Republican party.

It is evident from the mood of this convention, the thrust of its platform, and the contest over the nomination that the GOP of 1968 is moving to the political center.

This means that if a Republican President is elected this fall the new administration will be more activist than some conservatives will relish and that dogmatic ideology will give way to pragmatic problem-solving.

For the Republicans this is the year of opportunity. They see victory well within reach and they are deliberately setting sail in what they are convinced is the mainstream of American political thought where most voters are.

Much evidence

The evidence is abundant:

1—The presidential nominee will be moderate. Under Nixon federal money may be spent differently and more wisely, but it is going to be spent.

2—The platform shows that it has been carefully drafted to make it comfortable for a moderate to run on and uncomfortable for a non-moderate. It is made to order for Nixon or Rockefeller. In fact, Nixon and Rockefeller men did more to shape it than anyone else. It would be hard for Gov. Ronald Reagan to run on it—and that wasn't accidental.

3—You could argue that the GOP platform is filled with pussyfooting. But that is naive and unfair. Party platforms are invariably vague on the most controversial issues. But the fact is that it is wise not to overcommit the possible next president of the United States when future circumstances may be quite different.

4—The plank on Vietnam is a good example. It is neither extremely hawkish nor extremely dovish. It supports a negotiated settlement of the war, but it opposes a "camouflaged peace" which would pave the way for a North Vietnamese Communist takeover.

It wants the South Vietnamese to be able to assume more of the fighting, but it opposes any unilateral American withdrawal. The platform promises that the party will do nothing or say nothing during the campaign which would embarrass or undercut the U.S. peace negotiators in Paris.

Call this pussyfooting if you want, but I see it as responsible and prudent and patriotic. It is American politics at its best. It is aimed at bringing about a workable peace in Vietnam, and who can best do that will be a central issue in the election.

5—The Republican movement to the political center and away from the doctrinaire ideological mold of 1964 is also evident in the domestic side of the platform. It pledges a "vigorous, nationwide effort" by government at every level "to transform the blighted areas of the cities." It pledges "positive, enforcement" of all civil rights guarantees. It proposes programs dealing with poverty and hard-core unemployment. It is tough on crime and resort to violence. "We will not tolerate violence," the platform shouts, but promises an "even-handed" enforcement of the law.

It seems to me that the Republican platform and convention and the 1968 Presidential nominee are proposing to turn "modern Republicanism" into an activist program.

It is apparent to this convention that modern Republicanism means using conservative principles to deal with the nation's problems, not mouthing conservative words as a means of neglecting them.

Stroudsburg leads school districts in state aid for handicapped pupils

Record Harrisburg Bureau
HARRISBURG — Stroudsburg Area School District has been paid $13,327 in state funds by the State Department of Public Instruction covering costs of special classes for handicapped pupils conducted in its schools in the 1966-67 school year.

Stroudsburg operated four special classes in the indicated school term, the same number provided in the previous school year.

The department also paid three other Monroe County school districts state funds for this purpose for the past school term as follows:

East Stroudsburg Area, $2,876 for three classes, compared with a single special class in the 1965-66 school year; Pocono Mountain School District, $1,668 for four classes.

The latter district operated two classes in the previous term and Pleasant Valley School District, $3,443 for three classes, compared with two classes in the 1965-66 school year.

In all cases the special classes were for mentally retarded pupils in both elementary and high school grades, according to the department.

State funds paid to school districts for classes for handicapped pupils cover the difference in cost of teaching a pupil in special classes and a normal pupil in regular classes, department officials said.

Just Between Us—

By Bobby Westbrook

I have a bone to pick with Msrs. Huntley and Brinkley. In general their coverage of the convention was magnificent, and the faces of the individual delegates, caught off guard yawning, chewing gum, knitting, reading, or frankly asleep, while sneaky, was memorable.

And using the time when things dragged to interview individual delegates was excellent. But, as the champion of the underdog, I resented their denying their place in the sun to all the favorite son nominees.

For instance, I resented the fact that now I'll never know what Gov. Walter Diefel of Alaska looks like, because the television cameras were so busy trying to anticipate the slightest changes in delegate strength that they never showed him in his moment of glory.

After all, he'll probably never be nominated for President of the United States again and I wanted him to have his moment on television. With the rest of the television audience, I would have preferred a little more suspense about what was going to happen to the feeling that, in their efforts to forecast what was going to happen, before anybody else, Huntley and Brinkley were really making it happen that way.

It's like having somebody tell you the end of a play right in the middle. I want my cast of characters complete, even to the bit players. After all, Huntley and Brinkley can be on television every night.

Shorty and Dolly Long

Area country music man to bring band to festival

EAST STROUDSBURG — Shorty Long and the Santa Fe Rangers will be among the six bands to perform at the second annual Country and Western Music Festival to be held on Aug. 24.

Two three-hour shows will be given at 2 and 8 p.m. in Kohler Field House at East Stroudsburg State College for the benefit of the General Hospital of Monroe County.

Except for a year he spent on Broadway starring in "The Most Happy Fella," Shorty Long has always promoted the sound of country and western music. He has a gift of perfect pitch.

He met his wife, Dolly, on the stage and they have been singing together ever since.

Dolly also records under the name of Cindy Owens and was chosen as one of the best female vocalists in a national poll published by Cash Box magazine.

Shorty and Dolly, along with his brother and father, operate Ontelaunie Park in New Tripoli. The Santa Fe Rangers are one of six bands to play for the festival which has been a year in the planning by Dr. John L. Rumsey.

At the meeting of the committee this week, it was announced that a 72 page program booklet for the festival has been sent to the printers, and 900 extra chairs will be installed in the field house.

Dr. Rumsey expects all of the more than 3,000 seats to be filled for the festival.

Firemen's families at picnic

EAST STROUDSBURG — The Acme Hose Co. of East Stroudsburg held their first family picnic on Sunday, Aug. 4 at Maple Hollow in North Bangor. There were about 150 present.

Horse shoe pitching engaged the adults and there were many games for the children with prizes for all of them. Swimming was also a highlight of the outing.

The committee in charge included Stanley Melvin, Sturges Bogert and Tom Sexton.

The success of the venture has encouraged the fire company to make it an annual affair.

Scouris host Miami guests

STROUDSBURG — Mr. and Mrs. Evan C. Scouris of 1743 Pokona Ave., Stroudsburg, are making the most of the visit of his brother, Milton, and his wife, Sophie, from Miami, Fla., for the first time since they left the Lehigh Valley in 1929.

Both families will attend the national convention of the Order of AHEPA, an international American-Hellenic Organization being held at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York City.

They have already visited Longwood Gardens at Kennett Square and attended a performance of "Plain and Fancy." They have also called on old friends in the Allentown, Bethlehem and Easton area.

On Tuesday night a surprise birthday lawn party was planned for Milton by the Scouris' where Greek-Syrian and Lebanese dishes were prepared by Mary Scouris. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Bishwaly, Mr. and Mrs. Ollis Scouris, Florence Karam, Jim Nazzetelli of Lehigh; Mr. and Mrs. Peter Harris of Allentown; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mickleby and Mrs. Irene Gaitanis of Bethlehem.

Kathleen Hedgelon, Joseph Smith wed

STROUDSBURG — Miss Kathleen Laura Hedgelon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hedgelon of Stroudsburg, was married on July 27 at 11 a.m. at Salem St. Paul Lutheran Church in Kresgeville to Joseph Lawrence Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Smith of 439 Fourth St., Dunellen, N.J.

The church was decorated with bouquets of white gladiolus and white pompons with white bows marking the family pews. Rev. David Burg performed the double ring ceremony with Mrs. Burg as organist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white linen trimmed with Venice lace at the scalloped neckline. It had a full chapel train. She wore a full-length mantilla with linen and Venice camelot with a three-tiered veil falling from the lace which framed her face. She carried a bouquet of white gladiolus and stephanotis.

Mrs. William Carlton of East Stroudsburg, sister of the bride, was her matron of honor. She wore a floor-length gown of pink linen with an empire waistline. A pink cluster bow held her short veil. She carried a colonial bouquet of pink gladiolus and stephanotis.

Donald Smith of Dunellen, N.J., was his brother's best man. Ushers were John Seignan, Philadelphia; Scott Sennel, Philadelphia; all fraternity brothers of the bridegroom.

The bride's mother wore an aqua dress of crepe with white lace trim and white accessories. The bridegroom's mother wore a two piece navy linen dress with navy lace trim and navy accessories. They both had corsages of white carnations.

A reception for 100 guests was held in the social rooms of the church which had been decorated with wedding bells and baskets of red roses and lilies of the valley.

Leaving for a weekend wedding trip, the bride wore a pale pink crepe dress with black accessories and carried a nosegay of red roses and baby's breath.

They will reside in Stroudsburg briefly until moving to Tamaqua where Mr. Smith is a biology teacher in Tamaqua Area Senior High School.

The bride is a 1965 graduate of Stroudsburg High School and is a senior at East Stroudsburg State College, where he was a member of Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity, was graduated from Dunellen High School, N.J., in 1962.

Waring Workshop Youth Choir sings Sunday

DELAWARE WATER GAP — Fred Waring's Choral Youth Workshop will sing at the 11 a.m. service on Sunday, August 11, at the Delaware Water Gap Methodist Church.

The public is invited to join members for the outstanding musical event of the church year.

Doors open for women in ministry

NEW YORK (UPI) — It was the Apostle Paul who admonished, "Let your women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law."

"And if they will learn any thing, let them ask their husbands at home: for it is a shame for women to speak in the church."

Paul was writing those words in First Corinthians nearly two thousand years ago. One wonders whether today the apostle would write the same stern command.

For women today speak out with potent voice in religious matters, as they speak out for equality, against the plagues of poverty and disease, against other social ills too numerous to count. And certainly the women speak forcefully in running the government of this nation.

Yet, through all those years, that curtain of silence has been drawn, almost completely about women in the ministry.

Now the woman selected Church Woman of the Year by the Religious Heritage of America believes the curtain will part.

She is Mrs. Stuart E. Sinclair of Greenfield, Mass., former national president of Church Women United, currently the organization's representative in the United Nations Association, and president of Women in Community Services, Inc. (WICS).

"I think the barriers will come down against women in the ministry," but as Jesus said, "It is not for you to ask the time," is the way Mrs. Sinclair puts it.

Her own denomination has women ministers, she pointed out. Mrs. Sinclair is a member of the United Church of Christ.

"I think more women aren't in the ministry," she said in an interview "because of doctrinal matters...they break down slowly."

"Women have such a great gift: I often think our churches are using only half of the membership's talents. Women know what is a happy child, they understand what it is like to be the deprived child, they understand what it is like to be the deprived child. Women are sensitive to slaughter, to war, to suffering."

"I think the preaching of women here could be most helpful," Mrs. Sinclair, one of the few women on the general board of the National Council of Churches, believes although few women are speaking from the pulpits, they're being heard anyway. Quietly, but forcefully.

She holds that women by their convictions and by making their convictions known in local churches, through resolutions at meetings, and through financial and personal support, manage to influence major church attitudes and decisions.

During the civil rights marches in Selma, Ala., she and others of Church Women United walked — "civil freedom is as important as religion," she says.

"Women of the churches worked for six years on civil rights before the major church bodies acted," she said. "We started in 1961. We had an inventory for each of us and for our local councils. We put ourselves against a measuring tape in our attitudes towards equal rights, equal dignity, equal housing..."

Mrs. Sinclair feels the church women accomplished a lot: personal attitudes changed and public pronouncements on such things as open housing and investment in ghetto improvements began to come from church leaders.

"We have found that Christian women must come together," she says. Church leadership comes naturally to Edna Sinclair. Her family was active in support of the missionary movement and Mrs. Sinclair recalls, "Our house always seemed to have international visitors."

She grew up in Western Pennsylvania but marriage took her to Massachusetts. Her husband is director of research for the United Greenfield Corp. and the couple has three grown children and six grandchildren.

Mrs. Sinclair's list of offices in various church organizations would take up several inches in Who's Who.

For eight years, she was a member of the National World Day of Prayer advisory committee and also served as its national chairman. During the observance of the 75th anniversary of World Day of Prayer, she led fellowships in India and Nepal, and visited schools and hospitals in India, Ceylon, Pakistan and Jordan.

She then was a member of a delegation of the National Council that travelled to Bangkok and other Southeast Asia points in 1965 to confer with leaders of the Christian churches of the area on Vietnam.

Religious Heritage, in citing her as the Church Woman of the Year, paid tribute to her many years of leadership and inspiration.

"We must love our brother not by words but by action," says Mrs. Sinclair. "In India, I told the women I met that God didn't call us to be the sugar of our nations, but the salt."

No date has been set for the wedding.

Fetherman-Hope wedding announced

EAST STROUDSBURG — Pauline A. Hope of 418 North Courlland St., East Stroudsburg, became the bride of William C. Fetherman of Locke Heights, Bangor, at the First United Methodist Church on July 27.

The bride wore a blue princess line dress with white accessories and a corsage of pink sweetheart roses. The matron of honor wore pink with white accessories and a corsage of yellow sweetheart roses.

Soroptimists picnic, plan Fall projects

STROUDSBURG — The Monroe County Soroptimist Club enjoyed a picnic along the Delaware River as guests of Mrs. Marguerite Clarkson. Members joined in swimming and hikes through the wood until dusk. They adjourned to the bungalow for socializing and a short business meeting.

President Elizabeth Martin named chairman of committees for the coming year and plans were discussed for Fall activities.

The Fall rummage sale will be held in November. Fruit cake bars were ordered to be ready for sale by the first of October. Members were urged to be held the first week in December.

Local delegates to the national conference in Atlantic City were Mrs. Jean Barthold and Miss Anna Stem. They will give the report of the conference at the September meeting to be held at the Motel Inn Towne on Thursday, Sept. 26.

Germany-bound

MOUNT POCONO — Mrs. Liane Schultz, the former Sandra Fanseen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Fanseen, Mount Pocono, left by plane this week to join her husband in Stuttgart, Germany, where they will be stationed for 18 months.

Rev. Guy H. Everly performed the ceremony. Mrs. Hope's son, Michael Hope, gave the bride in marriage. Mrs. Liane Barnes was her mother's matron of honor.

The bridegroom was attended by his son, Martin Fetherman.

The bride wore a blue princess line dress with white accessories and a corsage of pink sweetheart roses. The matron of honor wore pink with white accessories and a corsage of yellow sweetheart roses.

A small reception was held at Leah's Tavern, Pen Argyl, for relatives and friends.

King Antiochus left inscriptions explaining that he chose his grave site as the "utmost ridge" of his kingdom and "in closest proximity to the heavenly throne of Zeus." This is believed to be Nemrud Dag in southeast Turkey.

JACK O'BRIAN'S

Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — The "Dear World" musical wanted Angela Lansbury as its fall star so desperately, it will pay that gifted gal $11,000 a week. Phil Silvers is having a rough go in Mt. Sinai Hospital, Los Angeles. Glen Gray's widow died (like Glen, of cancer) in Plymouth, Mass. Lena Horne says No More Nightclubs. John Clark Gable, age seven, played Mozart at a kiddie concert and got raves. Songstress Helen O'Connell stars in the Rainbow Grill, 65 floors straight up in Rockefeller Center; she started there in the basement as the "Today" show's gal. The Tom Fogarty's expect their first baby; Tom's first child—his two with former wife designer Ann Fogarty—were adopted. Ann's now Mrs. Dick Kollmar, wife of Dorothy Kilgallen's widower.

Democrats eaten up

We receive a lot of free books at our house from authors and publishers.

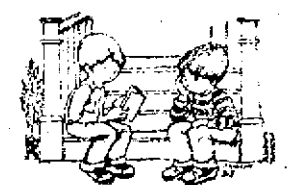

With the exception of those with sex in the title or cartoons throughout they are passed over by my children.

One small lumen written by my friends, Fred and Jo Mazzulla, of Denver, arrived last week, was whisked away by the kids and has not been seen since. It falls in neither category.

It is the bizarre story of Alfred Packer, a Colorado prospector who travelled to Slum Gullion Pass one winter with five other prospectors. Beset by cold, starvation and physical and mental suffering beyond belief, Packer is alleged to have killed five of his fellow prospectors and lived off their flesh. In legend, the victims were said to have been five of the only seven "Dimmycrats" in Hinsdale County.

I have never fancied myself a book reviewer of any repute, but the retelling of the book according to a nine-year-old is enough to make any author turn cannibalistic.

Story retold
Here is the way the book sounded as he related it to a young friend. "Boy, what a neat book! There was this guy who ate people and one winter when he went on a hunting trip into the mountains, he discovered he didn't have no money, no food, no Diner's Card, no nothing. Well, for a while he ate snow cones, but that didn't satisfy him, so one night he thought if he didn't have a snack he was going to die, so he picked up a hatchet and killed the other men."

"He didn't have to worry about putting them in a refrigerator or food locker because he had all that ice, so he nibbled on them for a month or so. I told you it was a groovy book."

"Well, when spring came, Old Al came down from the mountains and into the village. He looked real fat and healthy and the people were suspicious. One guy came up to him or the street and said, 'How are your buddies?' Al laughed a dirty little smile and said, 'They were a little tough and a little dry but no one's perfect.'

"And here comes the neat part. This old prospector was a Nixon man, Republican all the way. So when he got back to town he told the Republican Party, 'I did you a big favor, I wiped out the other party. There are only two Democrats left.'

"Well, it didn't say in the book but I think one of the Democrats left was the judge 'cause he sentenced Al Packer to be hung by the neck until dead, dead, dead! 'Course he got a new trial. He didn't die neat then. He just died."

"Today, Al's a big hero. Got a big monument you can visit in the summer. I guess of all the cannibals in the West, he was the biggest! If you wanna read the book under the covers with a flashlight, it's neater that way."

Ann Landers

Cook for kook

Dear Ann Landers: What is a mother to do when her husband teaches the children crazy eating habits? I know what made Alphonse nutty — his mother. She stood over the stove 10 hours a day cooking separate meals for every cracked member of the family.

His sister was a vegetarian and his two brothers wouldn't touch fresh fruits or vegetables or fish or chicken. An unmarried aunt who made her home with them lived on carrot juice, wheat germ, yogurt and hard-boiled eggs. His father wasn't crazy, just sick, but he had to eat special foods because of ulcers and diabetes.

When I married Alphonse I knew he would not eat or drink anything white — potatoes, milk, rice, white bread, cottage cheese, whipped cream. The list is a long one. Now our oldest son (age six) tells me he won't eat anything Daddy won't eat. Our youngest son is only three but he is already pushing away certain foods.

If you have any suggestions please pass them on. I am —

I am writing to ask what to do about my husband's widowed sister, Emily comes to our home every Sunday for dinner and never leaves without making some cruel remark about our not having a family. (She never says anything in my husband's presence.) Yesterday Emily looked around at our newly furnished sun porch and sighed. "A home is not a home without children. What a pity you failed George." She quickly added, "I know it's not your fault, dear, but it's a pity nevertheless."

This morning I received in the mail an article from a cheap magazine which said, "A man cannot truly love a woman until she bears his child." There was no evidence of who sent the article but I know very well it was Emily. Incidentally, she was married 25 years and had five children. Her husband drank himself to death and three of her children do not speak to her or to each other.

Shall I continue to burn silently or should I say something to George?

COOK FOR A KOOK

Dear Cook: You can't change Alphonse's eating habits at this late date but you can refuse to knuckle under to the kids and I hope you do, for their sake as well as yours.

Make it clear that they will eat what is set before them and there will be no substitutes. If they push things away, say nothing. Remove the food from the table without comment. If they are hungry in an hour, tell them, "Sorry, mealtime is over." After a while they will eat what is served and everyone will be happier.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I have been married 17 years. He is a lovely man and our marriage is an extremely good one. The tragedy of our lives is that we were never blessed with children. I went to specialists in three cities and was told by all it was extremely unlikely that I would ever have a family.

What awaits you on the other side of the marriage veil? How can you be sure your marriage will work? Read Ann Landers' booklet "Marriage — What To Expect." Send your request to Ann Landers in care of your newspaper enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Television notes

NEW YORK (UPI) — Producer Art Stark, who left NBC's "Tonight" program after 10 years of association with its star Johnny Carson, on that and a previous Carson show, is the new executive producer of ABC's daytime "Treasure Isle" series. At the same time, Stark became a vice president for new projects of MacArthur Productions, which puts out "Treasure Isle" and plans to become a major independent producer in television.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By B. Jay Becker

BIDDING QUIZ
You are the dealer, both sides vulnerable. What would you bid with each of the following five hands?

- ♠Q8743 ♥AKQ6 ♦A5 ♣J4
- ♠AKJ6 ♥A7 ♦83 ♣J8542
- ♠A5 ♥AQJ84 ♦J98763 ♣A
- ♠AK43 ♥854 ♦AJ3 ♣762
- ♠Q8 ♥AK3 ♦87642 ♣AJ9

1. One spade. This follows the general rule of bidding the longer suit first. There is no good reason to vary from the rule just because the hearts are better in quality. The length of the suit is the determining factor. The hearts can be shown later if the opportunity arises.

2. It would be wrong to open with a notrump, though it is true you have 16 high-card points and balanced distribution. The weakness in the minor suits, as well as the promise of a major suit game, militate against an opening notrump bid.

3. One club. Here, also, the longer suit is bid first. The club opening makes it possible to bid the spades secondarily and obtain the advantage of identifying them as only four cards in length. This precise information will often enable partner to steer the hand to the best contract.

4. One heart. An exception is made in this case by opening with a heart even though the diamonds are longer. The chief reason for this is that we are dealing with suits of 6-5 length rather than 5-4 length. When the high-card content of a hand is close to minimum, it is better to start with the higher-ranking suit even though it is the shorter one.

5. This is especially true when one suit is a major and the other is a minor. Since it is generally easier to make a major-suit game than a minor-suit game, the initial effort is directed to the major suit.

Change the spade five to the ace, thus adding 4 high-card points to the hand, and it becomes proper to bid one diamond.

4. Pass. There is simply no adequate bid available. To open with a spade and then be faced with the responsibility of finding a proper rebid over partner's forcing response of two clubs, diamonds or hearts is begging for serious trouble. You could not possibly find a rebid that would express your values correctly. A pass is therefore the best course of action.

5. One diamond. Hands containing 14 high-card points are mandatory opening bids. This rigid rule overrides the natural reluctance to open the bidding with a suit headed by the eight. There is no good reason to bid the three-card club suit, and there is even less reason to open with a notrump, which would show 16 to 18 high-card points.

Ezra dominates four Bible books

By R. H. RAMSEY

The Book of Ezra is a historical narrative closely linked with Nehemiah and with Chronicles I and II. All four are thought to have been parts of a single work by an unknown author, written about 350 B.C. or later. The book is named for the priest Ezra because he is its chief figure.

Ezra was one of the most important figures in Palestine immediately after the return of a group of Jews from the Exile, yet what little we know of him is found only in this book and the Book of Nehemiah. The exact date of his arrival in Jerusalem is unknown, the years 458, 428 and 398 B.C. having been suggested by various scholars. His mission was to revive Temple worship at Jerusalem and establish strict observance of the Mosaic law.

Jeremiah had prophesied that his people would remain in exile for 70 years. Counting from the time when the first leaders were carried away (606 B.C.), the city of Jerusalem and the Temple were destroyed (586 B.C.), until the exiles began returning (538 B.C.), his prediction was almost fulfilled. Actually, the people spent 68 years in Babylonian captivity.

Politically, the fall of Jerusalem and the Babylonian Exile were disastrous. Spiritually, they were beneficial, for the Exile was a renovating experience for the people of God. They were cleansed of every disposition that had formerly led them into idolatry and that sin was forever thrust from them.

One effect of the Exile was that the people were no longer known as Hebrews. As subjects of the kingdom of Judah, they became known as Judahites or Jews. Another effect was in the language. They had gone into exile speaking Hebrew. They returned speaking Aramaic.

Following his capture of Babylon, Cyrus, king of Persia, issued a decree that any of the exiles who so desired could return to Jerusalem and rebuild the Temple. As evidence of his good will, Cyrus returned to them the gold, silver and sacred vessels which Nebuchadnezzar had looted from the Temple at the fall of Jerusalem.

Not all the exiles wished to return, for the captivity had not been harsh. They had been comfortable, had almost complete freedom, had kept slaves, engaged in business, and some had risen to high political offices.

Still, many longed for their homeland and were willing to accept any degree of hardship in order to return. Almost 43,000 of these returned in 538 B.C., led by Zerubbabel, heir to the throne of Judah. A fairly complete and detailed roster of them is given in Ezra 2, yet nothing is said of the long journey from Persia and Babylon to Jerusalem, though the journey could hardly have taken less than four months.

After the roster is a statement of the Jews' financial support for the rebuilding of the Temple. They not only gave, they gave at great cost to themselves — almost half a million dollars in present-day currency, plus the jewelry and precious objects put at the disposal of the Temple builders.

One of the first acts of the returning exiles was the construction of altars for burnt offerings, and the restoration of the ancient worship and feasts. Thus the Jews reconsecrated themselves to God.

Then the people began rebuilding the Temple. As the foundations were being laid, the sounds of joy and weeping were heard. Joy, because they were permitted to again build a Temple to the only true and living God. Weeping, because the very aged — who had seen the magnificent Temple of Solomon in their youth and lived through the captivity — wept when they compared its crude beginnings to the vanished splendor of another era.

Though very little had actually been accomplished, the people gathered at the Temple foundations and celebrated, singing songs, praising God and giving thanks. The chastisement of the Exile was past, and the long-suffering mercy of God — enduring forever — was again smiling upon the chastened Chosen People.

"And they sang together by course in praising and giving thanks unto the Lord; because he is good, for his mercy endureth forever toward Israel."

Catholic dilemma

By GIL MURRAY

Record News Editor

STROUDSBURG — During the late 1960s the Catholic Church was wrestling with the difficult problem of integrating its parochial school system in the deep south.

This was at least four years after the Supreme Court's landmark decision outlawing equal but separate public school facilities.

The church has made several pronouncements on the evil of racial segregation, but was finding it difficult putting this fairly simple moral doctrine into effect.

The church suddenly found out that otherwise strong Catholics would fight a situation they did not personally approve. Southern Catholics bluntly told the hierarchy they would leave the fold if schools and churches were integrated.

It seemed that these people would only follow doctrine when that doctrine did not come into conflict with deep-seated social convictions.

It was not until 1963, nine years after the court decision, that the schools and churches in New Orleans were integrated.

The message was clear for anyone interested in taking notice of what transpired.

A large number of Catholics were ready to ignore church law if it involved personal conflict.

The church faces a similar, but larger problem, today.

Pope Paul has decreed that the use of artificial birth control is against "natural law" and, therefore, against Catholic dogma.

Any Catholic woman who uses "the pill" does so under the threat of committing a mortal sin. The furor over the decision was immediate and vocal.

According to reports, uncounted thousands of Catholic women presently take "the pill" or employ some other means of birth control, rather than using the church-approved "rhythm system."

The problem is much more serious, however, than the integration delay.

This time, a large number of leading Catholic thinkers and priests have joined the laity in condemning the Pope's edict as being essentially backward.

Protestant leaders have attacked the ban as being a blow to the carefully nurtured ecumenical movement that abounds today.

Where will this type of situation lead? For years, the church gained strength from requiring Catholics to follow dogma on faith alone.

Ten years ago, the two strongest ideologies in the world were Communism and the Catholic Church. In the light of current events, the church's position must be questioned.

It's a difficult area for both the Pope and Catholics. There is no questioning the fact that the basis of christianity must be accepted on faith.

But, in 1968 it is possible to tell Catholics not to question a decision which has more social overtones than religious conviction.

Obviously it's not, and there lies the problem for both Pope and Catholics.

What will happen to the horizontal power structure within the church which has worked so efficiently for centuries?

Will questioning Catholics render the Pope's infallibility on morality useless?

The question is a serious one for liberal thinkers to ponder.

In this complex world people want and need a basis for religious belief.

Common ground is what Christians now must seek. It seems the world with no longer accept supreme authority in any matter.

Plans For Life

The drawings of the architect or draftsman are all done on the drawing board with ruler, T-square, triangle, compass and so on. If the plans be for a building, how it will look when constructed must be visualized. There is a definite something not shown on the drawings that may add either beauty or ugliness to the structure.

In the plan of life there are certain vital qualities, not material, not shown in the blue prints, that will affect life's outlook. Some of these may be faith, hope, courage and the spirit of love. On the other hand they may be cynical disbelief, depression, fear and malice. How may we keep and develop the former and dispel the latter even under adverse conditions?

The Church is a kind of architectural school of life. Attendance at this school and faithful home study of its lessons will lay the foundation for the erection of a life that is full of joy, harmony and fortitude, enabling one to meet whatever the world has to offer and to successfully combat the forces that spell defeat. Attendance regularly at the church of one's choice will provide excellent blue prints for a beautiful life.

January 21 to February 19 (Aquarius) — Excellent Uranus influences. There are so many advantages available that you should have no dull moments—especially in the seeking!

February 20 to March 20 (Pisces) — Even though you may be "doing fine", further progress is still in the cards. Revise where you should and, without qualms or worry over what others may say—providing you act wisely.

S-burg school loses $43,000

STROUDSBURG — The Pennsylvania Department of Public Instruction has ordered the Stroudsburg Area School District to turn over to the Stroudsburg Area Building Authority $43,000 from the present and also last year's budget.

The school district received the $43,000 as reimbursement for its building program under the National Defense Education Act, $20,000 in the 1967-68 budget and $23,000 in the 1968-69 budget.

The transfer of $43,000 from the district's general fund to the authority means that the school board faces a loss of $43,000 which represents nearly two mills, since a mill is based on $27,000.

Current millage in the school district is 49 mills.

The school board purchased a hot water heater and awarded bids during a special meeting held Wednesday in the Junior High School.

The heater for the Arlington Heights Elementary School was purchased from Patterson-Kelley, East Stroudsburg, at a

No decision on replacing Penn-Stroud

STROUDSBURG — Lee Andrews, general manager of the Penn-Stroud Hotel, said Thursday he has made no firm decision yet to demolish the current hotel structure and build a new motel.

Andrews said his decision to demolish the historic structure depends on the construction price of the new motel and mortgage terms to be made with banks.

Demolition of the Penn Stroud was first made known last year. Andrews said Thursday, however, that he had been planning to construct a new motel for the past three years.

Since that time, Andrews had obtained architectural designs for the proposed new motel but has withheld any official action on the matter pending the final outcome of the construction costs and the mortgage terms.

Andrews said that bids for demolition of the present structure and the construction of a new will be received sometime next week.

If the bids are higher than anticipated, Andrews said he may scuttle his plans for a new motel. If the bids are acceptable to him, he said, he will negotiate for a mortgage. If mortgage terms are acceptable, Andrews said he would construct the new motel.

Andrews had indicated that if all terms are acceptable to him, demolition of the current structure may begin this fall.

Meter maid request tabled

STROUDSBURG — A recommendation by Howard (Bud) Altemus that another meter maid be hired was tabled at the request of Stroudsburg's Mayor Joseph H. Small, who Thursday during a meeting of borough council, said, the proposal should be discussed with police chief John B. Trelleway.

"The chief's away on vacation," Mayor Small said. "I'd like action to be held over until he gets back." Small added that he was against additional employment of meter maids because of the limitation of their dealing with certain obnoxious males in ticketing their cars.

"If you get a man who is intoxicated, or a dangerous male, can the meter maid handle them?" Small asked Altemus.

Altemus claimed the borough was losing money.

"We're $4,000 ahead of last year at this time on parking revenues," Small said.

"That's because of the shutting down of Wyckoff's parking lot," Altemus said.

"I run the police department," Small said.

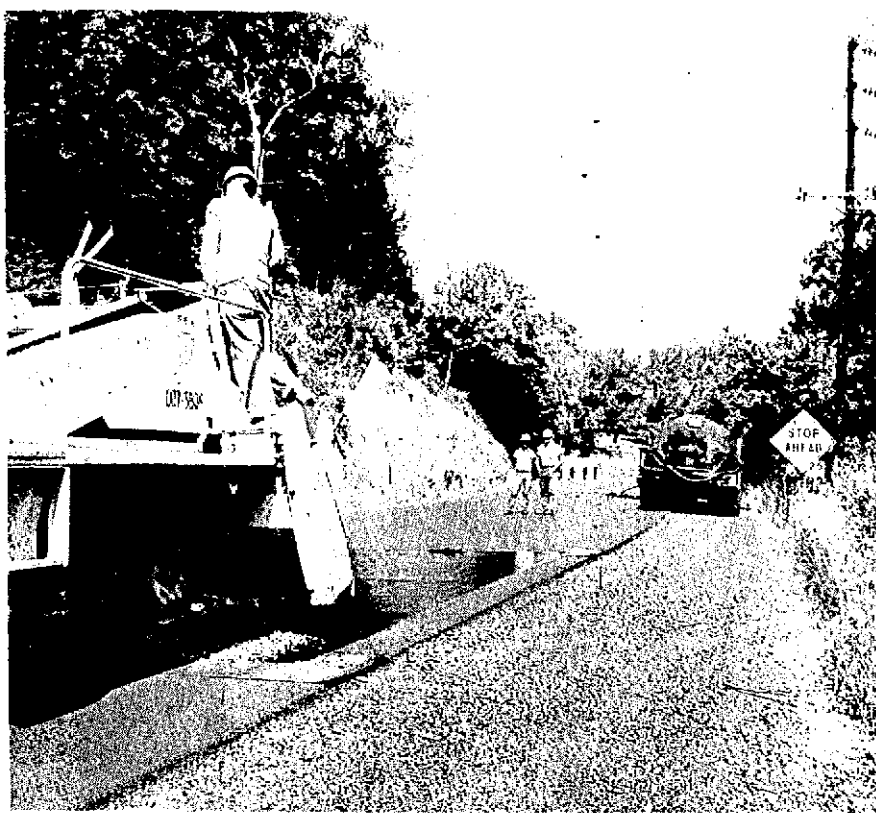

Altemus answered, "And we run the borough."

Council president Joseph Wallace said the meter maid situation should be discussed with Trelleway and on the chief's return the matter will be ironed out.

Small discussed the removal of parking meters around the Penn Stroud Hotel and proposed a charge of 50 cents per meter per day when the meters are removed for the Penn Stroud's demolition which is expected to begin after Labor Day.

Council agreed to purchase a riding tractor-mower for mowing at the sewage treatment plant. The purchase will be made from G.W. Sebring and Son, Stroud Township, for $750.

Phillip H. Williams, Stroudsburg attorney, presented petitions to council on behalf of residents of Woodchiff Ave. urging council to accept, lay out and grade the street.

Plan for Tocks 'impact area' to be completed this month

EAST STROUDSBURG — Smithfield Township supervisors were informed Thursday night that they can expect preliminary plan of the Tocks Island Planning District for three townships of Monroe county to be completed by the end of this month.

A proposed, comprehensive plan for township planning and zoning for the "impact" district includes Smithfield, Middle Smithfield and Price townships and is being prepared by Raymond & May Associates of Washington, D.C.

Lorne Bachelder, township planner, introduced Melvin Barr, representing the planning consultants, who briefed township supervisors and planners as to the progress of the preliminary comprehensive plan and brought some of its important points to the attention of the members.

The township has advanced funds to the consultants for their study which will include 3,000 information brochures on district planning which will be distributed among all the townships of the county according to percentage population and funds provided by each township.

The supervisors asked Barr "what can we expect?" Barr summarized at first that there was little response from the public during three recent hearings, both at county and township level.

"So, we are taking the initial steps in its formulations," Barr continued and the plan is now in its final stages and you can expect the report at the end of the month.

The consultants had previously forwarded to the supervisors one part of the report, a proposed subdivision regulation and can expect the second part, a proposed zoning control plan next week.

The final part of the plan will formulate procedures for sewage facilities, commercial development and highway systems.

Barr explained that the plan only forms the basis for subsequent township planning and that it is only a proposal, subject to adjustment or "tailoring" be each of the three townships in question.

"Our plan is inclusive," Barr said "and by no means is this plan a final, legal document. It was recommended to the county and is being proposed to the townships."

Barr emphasized that the total plan, being "inclusive" is also "complex" in its writing and will require a great deal of time for study by the townships and suggested that supervisors concentrate on evaluating the plan.

Wood drops protest; alternate does voting

By DAVID B. OTTAWAY

Record Convention Bureau
MIAMI BEACH — John D. Wood, 15th District delegate to the Republican Convention, revealed Thursday that Gov. Raymond P. Shafer had asked him not to cast a protest vote so that all of Pennsylvania's 64 votes could go to Richard Nixon in a gesture of reconciliation with the party's presidential nominee.

Wood, one of two "Peace Delegates" in the delegation, had vowed earlier to cast a protest vote rather than to support Nixon for President.

Initially, the Pennsylvania delegation cast 41 votes for Governor Nelson Rockefeller, 22 for Nixon, and one for California Gov. Ronald W. Reagan.

Unlike Wood, Mrs. Barbara Y. Benner, the 15th District's second delegate, was more conciliatory about the Nixon victory. She, like Wood, had initially voted for Rockefeller.

"We fought a good fight, we lost, and are now happy to support the winner. We are going home to work very hard for the ticket," she said.

Both she and Theodore R. Berber, one of the District's alternate delegates, said they were "totally surprised" by Nixon's choice of Agnew.

Berber seemed happy about Nixon's nomination. He said that Nixon conveyed a "confident and certainty of purpose" that would impress Americans.

"The country is looking for this kind of calm and sure experience," he said.

Berber noted the determination of the delegates to be united and the lack of bitterness and rancor at the convention this year compared to that of four years ago.

But when Nixon passed the magic number of 667 needed for nomination, Gov. Shafer, who had earlier nominated Rockefeller, wanted the delegation to vote unanimously for the winner.

Wood said Shafer asked him and several other Anti-Nixon delegates to leave the room and let their alternates vote in their place.

The 15th District Delegate decided to comply, rather than demand a poll of the delegation as New Jersey and Virginia had done.

"I respect Shafer and I didn't want to undermine him any more than he already has been due to the split in the delegation."

"It was so damn important that Pennsylvania go unanimously that I left and let my alternate sit in."

Wood added that he had a "distinct feeling" that he was not a part of the whole process and was "an outsider."

"I was almost a bystander," he said in an interview Thursday at the Diplomat Hotel.

The 37-year-old Lehigh University scientist was visibly upset and at loose ends. Following news that Nixon had chosen Maryland Gov. Spiro Agnew to be his running mate, he said, "I'm totally frustrated. I feel very strongly about the situation."

Wood called the choice of Agnew a "blatant payoff" to the Southern delegations and said he thought there ought to be a floor fight to oppose the nomination.

"The frustrating thing is that there are so many young, dynamic people in the party like New York Mayor Lindsay."

Wood said he has received two letters from constituents in the 15th District asking him to nominate Gov. Shafer.

He asserted that, with Agnew on the ticket, the Republican Party has "another stone around its neck" and predicted it would have rough going in Easton and Bethlehem.

The struggle over the Pennsylvania delegation between Nixon and Rockefeller continued down to the last moment.

Wood said every member of the delegation had received a telegram from Barry Goldwater on the floor of Convention Hall in which the former Republican Presidential candidate denied that Rockefeller had ever offered him his support after the bitter 1964 Convention.

Goldwater had joined Nixon forces in an attempt to discredit Rockefeller as a good party man.

Wood said both Nixon and Rockefeller elements in the delegation were now "preaching party unity until they are blue in the face."

Asked what he thought of the nominating proceedings, Wood said ironically: "It had to be organized to be that boring."

County firemen plan fall school

MOUNT POCONO — Fall is back to school time and the more than 50 men who attended Thursday night's meeting of the Monroe County Firemen's Association in Mount Pocono approved final plans for the annual fire school scheduled September 28 and 29 in Reenders.

A total of four classes will be offered this year at the Jackson Township Fire Department with the highlighted class being a session on forest fire fighting.

District Forester John Bilzer explained that the Department of Forest and Waters will present what he termed a unique class utilizing a forest fire simulator.

Bilzer explained that a regular landscape will be projected onto a screen and a forest fire will be simulated onto the landscape. The forest fire will then be made to spread about the landscape.

Students in the class, from this simulation, will learn by actually seeing what will happen to the forest fire when several firefighting techniques are brought into play.

The three other courses which will be offered are: a class in fire hose, ladder and pumper operation; pit-fires, gasoline and oil blazes; crash and rescue techniques.

Two classes will be held each day and will last three hours each. Registration will be 7:30 a.m. on the days of the classes. Classes are from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. The Jackson Township Fire Department Fire Auxiliary will provide lunch.

Ray Silver, secretary-treasurer, reported that the association will probably receive its annual $1,000 payment from the county commissioners next month. Some Association members said privately that they would like the county aid increased to perhaps $1,500 since the annual fire school costs in the excess of $1,000.

Charles Degen, vice president, also announced that association members will tour the Philadelphia fire facilities October 6.

No plans as yet for motel

STROUDSBURG — Sheraton Hotels, Inc. has no plans to construct a motel on a site near Interstate 80 and West Main St. in Stroudsburg, a company official told The Pocono Record Thursday.

Philip Shay, vice president of public relations, said that Sheraton, although it has conducted a feasibility survey of the area, does not plan to build a motel on the site.

A representative of Shell Oil Co. told the Stroudsburg Borough Council Wednesday night that Shell will erect a service station on a six acre tract of land at Interstate 80 and West Main St.

The representative also said that Shell is negotiating with major motel chains in an attempt to have a motel constructed on the site.

Robert Berg, district manager for Shell in this region, said from his Newark, N. J., office Thursday that "Our only plans at the present time is to build a service station."

Berg acknowledged, however, that Sheraton Hotels has conducted a feasibility survey of the site, but denied that Shell was negotiating for a motel on the tract.

An official of Sheraton's said earlier this month, however, that he believed the hotel chain had taken no official action on the feasibility report.

A high-ranking official within the Shell Oil Co., however, confirmed that the company is considering Sheraton for the site.

Businessmen back S-burg council plan

STROUDSBURG — The Stroudsburg Businessmen's Association has passed a resolution favoring steps for urban renewal taken by the Stroudsburg Borough Council Wednesday.

Meeting with Michael Cabot of Cabot and Associates, planners for the borough, the businessmen congratulated council on the job they contemplate doing.

The businessmen said they hoped the borough would give priority to the Stofflet St. area, and also that they would consider Main St. problems, including traffic and parking.

According to Secretary Harry Mullins, the meeting of the Businessmen was the largest in two years. It was held in the House of Ming, Stroudsburg.

Man injured by barricade

EASTON — Dominic Ruggerio of Roseto was treated and released from the General Hospital of Monroe County Thursday following injuries he sustained when he was struck by part of a construction barricade.

According to Easton State Police, George Jourdan, 84, of Mount Bethel, was traveling east on Route 166 when he collided with a barricade where construction men were working.

Two Pocono Art Center "ceramic workshop" students, Diane Schaller of East Stroudsburg and Ted Nawroski of Mount Pocono work with clay in one of the many workshop studios at Shawnee.

Schlee registers 65 to pace Akron Open

Opening round scores

AKRON, O (UPI)—A slender John Schlee fired a brilliant 5-under-par 65 Thursday to take a two-stroke lead over young Bob Lunn at the end of the first round of the $125,000 American Golf Classic.

Schlee, playing in his second tournament over the difficult, 7,180-yard Firestone Country Club course, putted brilliantly en route to tying the course record of 65. It was the first time since 1962 that anyone has shot this low on the par 70 Firestone course. Others to turn the trick were Arnold Palmer, Bob Rosburg and Don Fairfield.

The six-foot two, 180-pound Schlee putted beautifully in his round which overshadowed a fine three-under-par 67 by Lunn. One of the late starters, Schlee had putts of 40 and 50 feet on the front nine, and made the turn in a two-under par 33.

Wearing a brilliant orange shirt and matching shoes, Schlee had his last of three bogeys on the tenth hole where his drive went under a tree and his next shot wound up in a trap. He added four birdies on the back nine and narrowly missed a 40-foot putt on the 18th, which would have given him a record 64.

Lunn's 67 was good enough for the early first round lead, but he still wound up two strokes behind the hot-putting Schlee. Next came relatively unknown Lee Elder of Dallas, Tex., who finished with a surprise 68.

Bruce Crampton of Australia and Tom Weiskopf, the tour's leading money winner, both stood at 69, four strokes off the pace.

"I started playing well last week, and I guess it carried over today," Schlee said. "I've had a real bad summer. I've been really working hard and not getting anywhere until now."

Standing at even-par 70 were Larry Mowry of Las Vegas, Palmer, and Jack Nicklaus, all five strokes behind. Nine players, including Al Henning, Tony Jacklin and Al Balding, were jammed at one-over-par 71 with several players.

U.S. pairs net aces

CHESTNUT HILL, Mass. (UPI)—Pairings of four teams likely to dominate the seedings in the national men's doubles tennis championships next week were announced Thursday by Longwood Cricket Club.

The four pairings who will be campaigning for the doubles title in the Aug. 16-25 Nationals, are made up of U.S. Davis Cup squad members.

Non-playing captain Donald Dell named Arthur Ashe to play with Cliff Richey, Charlie Pasarell with Clark Graebner, Stan Smith with Bob Lutz, and Jim Osborne with Jim McManis.

In addition, the eight U.S. cup squad members, who will be occupied by playing the Spanish Davis Cup team in Cleveland through Aug. 18, will all participate in the men's singles to form one of the strongest U.S. representations in several years.

Peeney, Wright win honors in Glen Brook golf tourney

STROUDSBURG — Betsy Peeney and guest Jean Wright won top honors at the Women's Golf Association's guest day at Glen Brook Golf Club on Thursday with a 64 in the best ball of partners division.

Miss Peeney carded a low gross of 80 on her own ball. However, since she had already won a prize, low gross for members went to Peg Gould with 93, and for guests to Helen Wohlers with an 86.

Low net prizes went to Helen Haynes, member, with 73 and to guest M. Dunlap with 74.

Lillian Bostick was closest to the pin on number eight for guests and Helen Zaccaro for members.

Tied for second in the best ball of partners were Barbara Garland and Edna Pierson who won the prizes in matching

AKRON, O (UPI)—A slender John Schlee fired a brilliant 5-under-par 65 Thursday to take a two-stroke lead over young Bob Lunn at the end of the first round of the $125,000 American Golf Classic.

Schlee, playing in his second tournament over the difficult 7,180-yard Firestone Country Club course, putted brilliantly en route to tying the course record of 65. It was the first time since 1982 that anyone has shot this low on the par 70 Firestone course. Others to turn the trick were Arnold Palmer, Bob Rosburg and Don Fairfield.

The six-foot, two, 180-pound Schlee putted beautifully in his round which overshadowed a fine three-under-par 67 by Lunn. One of the late starters, Schlee had putts of 40 and 50 feet on the front nine, and made the turn in a two-under par 33.

Wearing a brilliant orange shirt and matching shoes, Schlee had his last of three bogeys on the tenth hole where his drive went under a tree and his next shot wound up in a trap. He added four birdies on the back nine and narrowly missed a 40-foot putt on the 18th, which would have given him a record 64.

Lunn's 67 was good enough for the early first round lead, but he still wound up two strokes behind the hot-putting Schlee. Next came relatively unknown Lee Elder of Dallas, Tex., who finished with a surprise 68.

Bruce Crampton of Australia and Tom Weiskopf, the tour's leading money winner, both stood at 69, four strokes off the pace.

"I started playing well last week, and I guess it carried over today," Schlee said. "I've had a real bad summer. I've been really working hard and not getting anywhere until now." Standing at even-par 70 were Larry Mowry of Las Vegas, Palmer, and Jack Nicklaus, all five strokes behind. Nine players, including Al Henning, Tony Jacklin and Al Balding, were jammed at one-over-par 71 with several players.

U. S. pairs net aces

CHESTNUT HILL, Mass. (UPI)—Pairings of four teams likely to dominate the seedings in the national men's doubles tennis championships next week were announced Thursday by Longwood Cricket Club.

The four pairings who will be campaigning for the doubles title in the Aug. 16-25 Nationals, are made up of U.S. Davis Cup squad members.

Non-playing captain Donald Dell named Arthur Ashe to play with Cliff Richey, Charlie Pasarell with Clark Graebner, Stan Smith with Bob Lutz, and Jim Osborne with Jim McManis.

In addition, the eight U.S. cup squad members, who will be occupied by playing the Spanish Davis Cup team in Cleveland through Aug. 18, will all participate in the men's singles to form one of the strongest U.S. representations in several years.

Peeney, Wright win honors in Glen Brook golf tourney

STROUDSBURG — Betsy Peeney and guest Joan Wright won top honors at the Women's Golf Association's guest day at Glen Brook Golf Club on Thursday with a 64 in the best ball of partners division.

Miss Peeney carded a low gross of 80 on her own ball. However, since she had already won a prize, low gross for members went to Peg Gould with 93, and for guests to Helen Wohlers with an 86.

Low net prizes went to Helen Haynes, member, with 73 and to guest M. Dunlap with 74.

Lillian Bostick was closest to the pin on number eight for guests and Helen Zaccaro for members.

Tied for second in the best ball of partners were Barbara Garland and Edna Pierson who won the prizes in matching.

Game protectors have their fun

'Call of Wild' works too well

These are some of the interesting things Pennsylvania Game Commission men have heard and observed over the last month.

In Carbon County, John Postupack, deputy game protector in Jim Thorpe, reports that while visiting his brother-in-law he was asked by his host to listen to his electronic fox call and perhaps discover what was wrong. He had failed to raise a fox in many tries.

While they were testing it on the front porch, a grey fox ran up within 15 feet of them. The brother-in-law jumped up to get a gun but the fox ran across the yard and into the path of a car on the highway.

In the early part of July, F and C men Roy Adams and Hugh Clemons were driving along the Possum Creek section of SQL 57, when they noticed a rather violent motion along the edge of the road. As they passed, they saw that a rattlesnake had hold of a young rabbit.

When the truck backed up, the snake released the rabbit and went under some roots and brush. The rabbit, a snowshoe, about 1/2 grown, gave a couple of feeble jerks and died. It had been struck on the head between the ears. One ear was slightly swollen and had turned a dark purple color. Nature in the raw is seldom mild. — Land manager, G. E. Sprankle, Mehoopany.

COLUMBIA COUNTY — Many times during the career of a game protector, he is called upon to perform tasks above and beyond his primary duties. On July 31 this happened to our local Game Commission land manager. It seems that he performed as a "judge" at a local beauty contest. Am I envious? You bet I am. From henceforth my greetings to our "fortunate one" will be "Here come de judge, Here come de judge." — District Game Protector E. F. Sherlinski, Millville.

COLUMBIA COUNTY — Recently a female deer entered

Lapchick, Holman back as coaches

NEW YORK (UPI)—A pair of old rivals—Nat Holman and Joe Lapchick—come out of retirement next week to coach opposing teams in the professional basketball exhibition game staged as a tribute to the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

The game is slated for Aug. 15 and will feature such NBA stars as Bill Russell, Oscar Robertson, Wilt Chamberlain, Elgin Baylor, John Havlicek and Jerry West.

Holman and Lapchick both were members of the Original Celtics in the 1920s and later were intense rivals when Holman coached the City College of New York and Lapchick guided St. John's at a time when both teams were among the nation's top college squads.

Scranton — Tom Hillier, rally director for the Northeastern Pennsylvania Regional Sports Car Club has announced that the club will stage a championship rally Sunday from the Giant Market parking lot in Chinchilla.

Rallymasters Doug and Faith Dixon, have set up the route for a straight line speed distance event with the first car starting off at 1:30 p.m. Registration and assignment of car numbers will begin at 12:30.

Optimistic Bengtson

Green Bay going up — to fourth in row

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Phil Bengtson is a man on the spot.

For the new Green Bay Packers' coach, there seems to be only one way to go, and that's down. But the sages who are predicting the demise of the Packers aren't taking into consideration Bengtson's philosophy. He believes in the status quo.

"We won't be satisfied with anything less than No. 4," Bengtson says, referring to the Packers' three consecutive National Football League championships.

Vince Lombardi stepped out of the coaching post after leading the Packers to six NFL titles and to two consecutive Super Bowl crowns. In nine years, Lombardi's teams won 141 games, lost 39 and tied four, including both preseason and postseason clashes.

Bengtson, who came to Green Bay with Lombardi as his top assistant, has been the quiet man in the background who has shaped the Packers' defense. Last season, the Pack led the NFL in seven defensive categories, not to mention over-all team defense.

Willie Davis, 6-foot-3 and 245 pounds, and Lionel Aldridge, 6-4 by 245, anchor the defensive line. Ron Kostelnik at 6-4, 240, and Henry Jordan, 6-3, 250, provide an agile, mobile and hostile interior.

Top draft choice Fred Carr, 6-5, 240, will get a shot at tight end.

The linebackers, considered the finest trio in football, are Dave Robinson, 6-3 and 245; Ray Nitschke, 6-3, 240, and Lee Roy Caffey, 6-3, 250.

Both Herb Adderly, 6-1, 210, starting his eighth year, and six-year veteran Bob Jeter, 6-1, 205, have been All-Pro picks at cornerback. Willie Wood, 5-10, 190, is another All-Pro performer at safety, aided by five-year veteran Tom Brown, 6-1, 190.

Offensively, the Packers are just as strong. Quarterback Bart Starr has no peers. Even in what admittedly was an off-year in 1967, Starr completed 54.8 per cent of his passes for 1,023 yards and nine touchdowns.

In last week's College All-Star Game, Starr hit 17-of-23, includ-

You can imagine the results, everything upset, tables, clothes racks etc. The deer was finally wrestled to the floor and securely tied and later transported into the country and released. This is the second deer that has visited the same store in the past 5 years. — District game protector, H. F. Harter, Bloomsburg.

WYOMING COUNTY — The outlook for winter feed, for game and other wildlife, is not as good as at this time last year. There is a fair to good crop of huckleberries and the same can be said for wild black cherries; beechnuts are almost non-existent. Heavier than usual foliage prevents true assessment of what the acorn crop may be and other seed and nut bearing trees. — District Game Protector P. S. Sloan, Tunkhannock.

LACKAWANNA COUNTY — While attending to numerous beaver damage complaints over the years, I have noticed that sometimes unnatural materials are used by beavers in constructing their dams. Along with such natural materials as brush, sticks and stones, they are not against using any foreign or man-made items for their structures.

I have seen bottles, pots and pans, jars, old cut boards and just about any other object that happened to be handy.

Recently I examined the outlet of Sicker's Pond when called by Tom Popek the owner of the pond. Popek had been plagued all summer by a pair of beavers that insist on damming the outlet. Tom said that on one of his removal projects he found a complete rod and reel that the beavers had placed into the structure.

— District game protector J. L. Altmeier, Clarks Summit.

LUZERNE COUNTY — A complaint was received concerning a mother bear and two cub bears visiting near an amusement park at Harveys Lake. The owner of several cottages related this story to me.

One day he opened a cottage for inspection of future vacationers and he left a bathroom door open which could be entered from the outside. The owner decided to go into town and visit friends. When he returned from his visit he noticed bear tracks leading into his bathroom.

Upon departing the bear and the family left everything undisturbed and ship shape. — District Game Protector E. R. Gdosky, Dallas.

In Memoriam

IN LOVING memory of Josephine Kreego, August 9, 1906. Sometimes an old-fashioned song brings a thought of you. Sometimes a flower as we pass along.
Or a sky of azure blue;
Or a silver lining in a cloud
When the sun is peeping through.
No one knows the silent tears
Only those who loved can tell
The grief we bear in silence
When we have loved so well.
Deeply loved and missed by Husband: Earl
Children: Joan, Jean, Elton,
Raphel, Donald and Patsy.

IN LOVING memory of my dear mother, Mrs. Joseph C. Rufan, August 21, 1906.
She is peacefully resting at last. All her earthly trials and troubles are past.
She is gloriously satisfied.
With patience she bore,
Till God called her home
To suffer no more.
Sadly missed by daughter,
Mrs. Mary Devore

Ernest Ridgeway

E. Ridgeway honored for Eagle work

STROUDSBURG — Ernest Ridgeway, Stroud Twp., past president of the Stroudsburg Eagles, has been appointed eastern regional president of the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

Ridgeway's appointment came during a convention held in Houston, Texas, last week.

He is also a past Pennsylvania state president. Ridgeway will supervise Eagle activities in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York and eastern Canada.

The appointment was made by the Grand Worthy President, Harry Ford of Tennessee, in recognition of Ridgeway's many years of service to the order.

Labor union gives support

HARRISBURG — Monroe County is among 29 counties of eastern Pennsylvania covered by Local 158, Heavy and Highway Construction Workers Union, a 30,000-member union which endorsed Frank J. Pasquerella for State Treasurer.

Pasquerella is the Republican candidate for the appointment and according to John Stubbs, business manager of the Local, "this is the first public support of a political candidate in either party in the Union's history."

Local 158 represents laborers in highway, bridge and sewer building, concrete work, drilling and blasting and related occupations.

Paradise Twp. to utilize Reeder's dump

HENRYVILLE — The Paradise Township Supervisors have voted to make arrangements with Russell Butz of Reeder's for use of his landfill for township trash disposal.

Tentative arrangements had already been made with Butz, according to Carl Hamblin, secretary. An agreement would give township residents the option of transporting their own trash to the landfill or having a collector take care of it.

The supervisors were told at the meeting that work on blacktopping Route 586 would be begun as soon as the necessary papers have been approved and contracts signed, Hamblin said.
